- Q1: Sitting both in the euroCRIS Board and the VIVO Leadership Group you must be among the best placed colleagues to identify opportunities for collaboration between both organisations. Could you point out a couple of worklines you would see as suitable for this collaboration?

- Q2: As opposite to the other two VIVO UGs (the North American and the German-language ones), this Spanish-language UG you're coordinating is much more distributed geographically, even in terms of very different time zones. Do you think this may be a challenge?

- Q3: The German-language VIVO Group have already held five specific workshops to discuss the developments within their user community, the most recent one just a couple of months ago in March 2021, <https://events.tib.eu/vivo-workshop-2021/programm/>. Do you see opportunities for holding similar events for the Spanish UG?

Most of these VIVO-DE meetings were held as an on-site events, which made them much more fruitful in terms of networking. Do you think it may be possible to hold on-site meetings for the Spanish-language UG?

- Q4: One of the key features of an effective UG (esp around an open source solution) would be the ability to enable leading institutions in specific countries to provide support to others that are just starting out. Do you see a possibility of making this happen?

- Q5: There are quite a few Spanish-language VIVO implementations out there already, esp in Latin America, but none of them is as sophisticated as this Danish project NORA around research analytics, <https://nora.adm.dtu.dk/>. Would you see opportunities to share international developments happening within the wider VIVO community with the Spanish-language UG members, perhaps by making available presentations in Spanish language?
