Will Libraries Survive?

Rumors of the death of the brick-and-mortar library have been greatly exaggerated. Yes, the digital age has transformed the nature of data storage. But the public library will be a chief agent in providing access to digital information.

The Springer Compact started being operated by institutional Open Access support services at libraries in 2015 – back then we didn't yet call these kinds of agreements Read & Publish deals. The number of such agreements has however significantly grown ever since, as negotiated with various publishers by either Jisc Collections or the SHEDL Consortium in Scotland.

Developing Institutional open Access publishing Models to Advance Scholarly communication

Fact Sheet

Objective

In the transition towards Open Access (OA), institutional publishing is challenged by fragmentation and varying service quality, visibility, and sustainability. To address this issue, DIAMAS gathers 23 organisations from 12 European countries, well-versed in OA academic publishing and scholarly communication. The project will:

1. Map the current landscape of Institutional Publishing Service Providers (IPSPs) in 25 countries of the ERA with special attention for IPSPs that do not charge fees for publishing or reading. This will yield a taxonomy of IPSPs and an IPSP landscape report, a basis for the rest of the project.
